

Treaty of Perpetual Non-Belligerence

Preamble

We, the undersigned, representatives of different eras, civilizations, and cultures, recognize the importance of lasting peace among peoples and nations. By this agreement, we commit ourselves not to undertake any warlike action against one another, nor to support direct or indirect conflicts that may undermine mutual stability.

Article 1 – Definitions

1.1. "State" means each of the signatories, regardless of historical period or form of government.

1.2. "Conflict" includes any form of armed hostility, invasion, siege, economic blockade, or any act aimed at weakening the sovereignty of another signatory.

Article 2 – Obligations of Neutrality

2.1. No signatory may provide troops, weapons, funding, or logistical support to third parties intending to fight against another signatory.

2.2. Should a conflict arise between external powers, the signatories shall refrain from any military intervention, maintaining a position of absolute neutrality.

Article 3 – Peaceful Resolution of Differences

3.1. Any dispute among the signatories shall be resolved through diplomatic negotiations, mediation, or arbitration, avoiding the use of force.

3.2. The parties commit to convening a Peace Conference at least once every hundred years to review and strengthen the terms of this treaty.

Article 4 - Duration

This treaty shall remain in perpetual force, unless jointly revoked by all signatories through a written act ratified by each of them.

Article 5 - Signature

In witness whereof, the signatories affix their signatures in chronological order of appearance, attesting to their irrevocable commitment to non-belligerence.

Signatories in Order

Catherine II of Russia - Empress of Russia

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "Catherine".

Napoleon Bonaparte - Emperor of the French

Penthesilea of the Amazons - Queen of the Amazons (Greek mythology)

Gaius Julius Caesar - Consul and Dictator of Rome

Genghis Khan - Emperor of Mongolia

Sitting Bull - Sioux Chief of the Lakota Confederation